How Myrtle Beach's tourism industry rebounded in 2021

TOURISM, from A1

delivered to millions of people from a visitor standpoint as well as all of us as locals so I would hope we could do better next year, so we don't have quite the roller coaster that we had in 2021," she said of the business labor shortfalls.

Riordan said in other parts of the United States she is seeing retirees reentering the workforce. "Is that an option for us at the Grand Strand?" she asked. "We are going to explore that to see if there is a way we can encourage some seniors to take on the jobs that we have available."

The area, though still popular this fall, is not seeing the kind of demand that it sees in the summer, and that has helped business owners to see back and see what they need, Riordan said.

"I think we naturally have been able to take a little bit of a breath, exhale a little bit and get that under control, but I can already tell that our businesses are thinking ahead that January is the time to start training for the spring break workforce and what they will need in April."

The Myrtle Beach International Airport is breaking almost every flight record this year and was one of the top in the state during the summer months.

"We are seeing visitation from the North, which is really no surprise because of our weather, but also from the Midwest and the South," she said. "We are seeing Georgians come, we are seeing folks from Alabama. We are really just seeing visitation from all corridors."

With many also not taking cruises this year due to the pandemic, Riordan said visitors are looking for new domestic spots with some coming to Myrtle Beach.

The Canadian border reopened in November has also helped tourism. The 61st Annual CAN-AM Days are scheduled for March 12-20 next year.

"I was out and about doing errands yesterday and two different cars that I was driving by on (U.S.) 501 both had Ontario plates which made me really happy," she said. "What we love about our Canadians is that they usually stay for quite some time, so they have a really big impact on our local economy."

Looking ahead to 2022, Riordan acknowledged that COVID-19 is still around, with Omicron the new variant of concern. "We do worry about it," she said. "We continue to urge people to get vaccinated, to follow all of the health guidelines."

Riordan said she does not expect state mandates that could curb tourism.

"We just feel like we would rather use a carrot and really encourage people to protect themselves and that is hopefully what it takes to ride this latest variant wave."

Beach-based engineering company, requested to build 125 townhomes on Saw Horse Drive near S.C. 9.

County Councilman Mark Causey, whose district represents the project, led the charge to vote down the project Dec. 14, after Horry County's Planning and Zoning Commission recommended council not move forward with the project.

Traffic concerns were the major opposition against the project as the S.C. 31 extension spills out just down the road from the project.

73 single-family homes near SC 319 in Aynor

Venture Engineering requested to build 73 single-family homes off of S.C. 319, but Councilman Al Allen who represents the project's district voted against the project and asked his fellow council members to do the same.

The project was unanimously rejected by the council, weeks after it was turned by the county planning commission and community protests.

Allen's push against the project stemmed from it being within the 319 Rural Heritage Area Plan, which was adopted in 2011 to limit residential development in the area to maintain the rural character.

"I'm all for the protection of that area — we need to be cautious at what we are having out there," Allen said.

252 multi-family units along River Oaks Drive

Horry County Council unanimously rejected Landbank LLC's request to amend the Berkshire Village, which is a planned development district, or PDD, due to traffic concerns. The applicant was hoping to convert 252 of the remaining single-family units to multifamily.

The PDD which is off of River Oaks Drive in Carolina Forest — one of Horry County's fastest growing areas — currently allows for a total of 1,438 single-family units and 284 multifamily units.

Councilman Dennis DiSabato, who represents a portion of Carolina Forest, said infrastructure concerns in the area have now shifted to the River Oaks area as Carolina Forest Boulevard widening project was completed.

"Adding this much density on that road would become a traffic nightmare," DiSabato said.

251 single-family units near S.C. 701 in Loris

Horry County Council unanimously rejected to build 251 single-family units along S.C. 701 and Lawson Road in Loris due to traffic concerns.

The project was proposed by Squires Brothers Investment Group and was approved by the county planning commission with many in the audience groaning after that decision was made earlier in December.

Councilman Danny Hardee, who represents the district which contains the project, asked council to vote down the project due to infrastructure concerns pointing towards the fact that S.C. 701 needs turn lane improvements to be able to maintain the added traffic, according to the S.C. Department of Transportation.

conditions out there, 'Fella' we can't keep approving them and sending them to Highway 90 and causing more problems," Hardee said.

33 single-family units at the intersection of S.C. 66 and 905

Deerslayer LLC requested — and failed — to develop 33 single-family units at the intersection of S.C. 66 and S.C. 905 in Conway. Council unanimously voted down the project due to traffic concerns, as well.

The property contained over six acres of wetlands, though none of the properties were proposed within wetlands or flood zones.

A final request was shot down by council came from property owner Petri Kojari, who wanted to build two duplexes along Riverview Drive in Little River.
